

Suppliment ONE to Winter 99 catalog

After three years of research, trial and error and literally hundreds of pounds of wasted research materials, we are pleased to announce the beginnings of our Bakelite and Waterfall Furniture Hardware Lines. The frustration factor in their development caused us to gobble the equivalent weight of TUMS and other stomach soothers. However, we are happy with the results and our stomachs will, hopefully, heal. The chemistry for a product only made 50-60 years ago is either lost or a trade secret. The machinery to make these is the same. We even had to find & resurrect "antique" machines to make these products.

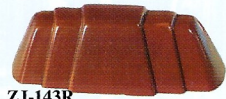

The Bakelite knobs and handles are "true" bakelite. They are as bright and clean as the first day, that Mr Baekeland's company made them. They do not look like 60 year old product, but will mellow, after some use. Now our items looks like pristine bakelite. Waterfall hardware plastic is NOT bakelite-nor was it hardly ever. It IS however, the same material as the antique waterfall handles, and made the same way as the originals; perhaps even with the same machines. Antique waterfall handles are still mis-named Bakelite by un-knowing antique dealers. However, we discovered their true nature and now make them identically and do plan to keep it--a trade secret.

The bakelite and nickel knob (above), and the bakelite and nickel handle (to the right) were found together at the same location on furniture and household cabinets. They were found only in a nickel plated finish; that is the only way we are offering them. Our bakelite colors are the same for both pieces: Cobalt Blue, black, blood red, Kelly green, & mustard yellow. The metal of the knob (before nickel plating) is brass. The metal ends of the handle sets are die cast
